KU, University of Sufism and Modern Sciences inks MoU to initiate joint research

The University of Karachi and the University of Sufism and Modern Sciences located in Bhitshah Town, Matiari, signed the memorandum of understanding to initiate joint research in the field of the sufism and modern sciences as well as to develop academic and educational cooperation, establishing a collaborative exchange program in networking, especially in the field of advisory sessions for the students that help to select the qualification that suits them best and to cooperate in each other's mutual interest.

The KU acting vice chancellor Professor Dr Nasira Khatoon and the USMS VC Professor Dr Parveen Munshi inked the MoU documents at the VC Secretariat on Thursday.

The KU acting VC Professor Dr Nasira Khatoon expressed that the students and faculty of the varsity would surely learn a lot about the sufism by arranging joint research activities, seminars and workshops, and exchange programs with the University of Sufism and Modern Sciences.

She believes that the faculty of the University of Karachi would assist the University of Sufism and Modern Sciences regarding modern sciences and designing courses that would benefit the students of rural Sindh.

Professor Dr Nasira Khatoon observed that women are making rapid progress in every segment of life. She said that enrollment of female students is on the raise across the country. She mentioned that the sufism is an interesting subject and added that it would attract a lot of students.

Meanwhile, the USMS VC Professor Dr Parveen Munshi the University of Sufism and Modern Sciences aimed to provide quality higher education to the people of rural areas of Sindh at their doorsteps.
